SAC activities teach children to 'survive' summer

By Mindy Campbell,
USAG Bamberg Public Affairs

It was time for tribal council.

One by one, as each name was called, the elementary age students stood up and walked over to the ceremonial drum.

Some children offered a half-hearted tap to the drum. Others performed a little dance and whacked the drum several times. The students then received a mark on their face and joined the ranks of their tribe.

The tribal council is just one of many activities offered during the School Age Center's Surviving the Summer 2010 program, said Michelle McClelland, School Age Center director.

"We have so many different activities we joke that we want to see if both the kids and staff survive the summer," McClelland said. "The kids rarely have time to sit down."

Each week a new cultural theme is introduced and activities throughout the week are tied into the theme.

Three Bamberg units recognized for deployment excellence

By Danielle House, G4 and Douglas DeMaio,
USAG Bamberg Public Affairs

Chief of Staff of the Army Gen. George W. Casey Jr. and Under Secretary of the Army Joseph Westphal recognized three Bamberg units for excellence in logistics in Richmond, Va., June 24.

The Bamberg units were Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 391st Combat Sustainment Support Battalion, 317th Maintenance Company, 391st CSSB and 173rd Brigade Support Battalion.

"Unit movements are challenging times for any organization," said Lt. Col. Christopher Luekenga, 391st CSSB commander. "It takes an immense amount of detailed planning, coordination and patience to move units from home station to its deployment location. The purpose of the Department of the Army Deployment Excellence Award is to recognize those organizations that excel at movement planning and execution. It's an award that recognizes units for all the hard work, dedicated hours and endless days planning, packing, loading, unloading and unpacking needed prior to the first set of boots hitting the ground. Unit movements set the stage for successful deployments and being recognized as one of the best is a great accomplishment for any organization.

"To have both the first place and the runner-up says a great deal about the quality of (noncommissioned officers), Soldiers, and leaders in both the (Headquarters and Headquarters Company), 391st and the 317th Maintenance Company."

The Combined Logistics Excellence Awards, also known as "CLEA," pulls together the Army Award for Maintenance Excellence, the Deployment Excellence Awards and the Supply Excellence Awards, all of which recognize the best logistics programs in the Army. Judges from the U.S. Army Transportation, Quartermaster and Ordnance Centers traveled around the world to conduct on-site evaluations of units nominated by their commands.

"This competition complemented but didn't necessarily enhance care given to the deployment process as we had a very well developed plan of action and the DEA was something that we wrote up following the deployment," said Capt. Jonas Bateman of the 173rd BSB, who developed the packet for the competition, but was unable to attend the award ceremony because he is deployed with his unit in Afghanistan. "The DEA was a way to tell the story of how the 173rd BSB conducted a professional deployment given its complexities of deploying from two different countries in Europe. The award also made for an excellent way to critique our own internal systems so that we can keep improving as an organization and provide valuable feedback to the 173rd ABCT for lessons learned."

Earning the award meant something special to Bateman, he said.

173rd Soldier killed in Afghanistan, recognized for service

By Task Force Bayonet Public Affairs

LOGAR PROVINCE, Afghanistan—Spc. Matthew R. Hennigan was killed in Wardak Province, Afghanistan on June 30.

Hennigan died at a U.S. medical treatment facility of wounds he received when his platoon was attacked while conducting a patrol.

He was assigned to B Company, 173rd Special Troops Battalion (Task Force Raptor), 173rd Airborne Brigade Combat Team, Bamberg.

"Matthew Hennigan grew from a wet-behind-the-ears boy into the most disciplined and dedicated Soldier that I've served with in a long time," said Chief Warrant Officer Eric Mayo, who was Hennigan's platoon leader. "I could not have asked for a better man to serve in my platoon. Matt was the best in us all and we will all feel his loss in our hearts forever."

Spc. Tyler Zick recalled his interactions with Hennigan.

"Matt was the best friend a guy could ask for," Zick said. "He was always up to spend time with the guys and was a really positive influence on all the Soldiers in Germany who were so far away from home."

A fellow Soldier in B Company, Spc. Chad Smith, also reflected on working with Hennigan and the skilled way in which he positively affected his fellow Soldiers.

"Matt had the ability to turn a difficult and stressful situation into an opportunity to learn something about ourselves," Smith said. "His spirit will live on in all the successes we have."

Hennigan served in the Army for two years and 11 months as a human intelligence (SOLDIER continued on page 8)

Summer program encourages kids to explore reading

By Mindy Campbell,
USAG Bamberg Public Affairs

Children shovled off for a rollicking adventure when the Bamberg Library recently kicked off its summer reading program.

Voyage to Book Island is a free four-week program for children in kindergarten through high school, which includes reading requirements, a project and field trip components, said Amber Enns, a library technician.

Depending on age, participants are required to read a certain number of books by July 21, the end of the program. The children must keep a book log of what they read and, based on their age, either orally or in a brief written essay provide a summary of each book.

In addition, a project must also be completed. The project can be any creative thing the children either read about in one of their books or saw on one of the trips, Enns said. In the past, projects have included things such as building a fortress or drawing a picture.

Each Wednesday, the children have the opportunity to attend a trip that is tied into the theme. Outings include visits to the Bamberg Enchanted Play Island, Engineer Lake and Schloss Thurn, a nearby castle and amusement park.

While the program is free, the outings are not. Entrance fees and money for bus fare is required. Also, parents must accompany the children on the outings, Enns said.

The program encourages children to see the fun side of reading.

"We want children to want to read not do it because they have to," Enns said. "We want them to become excited about reading."

Developing a love of reading makes life much better, she said.

"When you read you have so many new adventures and that helps your imagination grow," she said.

For more information about the reading program or to register, contact Amber Enns at 0951-300-1740 or stop by the library.

Swimming in Europe means adhering to safety policy

Ashley Bateman,
USAG Bamberg Public Affairs

As temperatures rise in Germany, Soldiers, civilian employees and family members may be looking for ways to stay cool and participate in water-based recreational activities. With many lakes, rivers and pools in Germany, Warner Barracks community members should be aware of the regulations governing where they may and may not swim.

U.S. Army Europe policy AEC190-24, which has been in effect for some years, dictates what swimming areas are authorized for Soldiers, civilian employees and family members. Legally, people in these categories may only swim in public and private swimming pools; rivers, lakes, ponds, rock quarries and other unguarded bodies of water are off-limits. Supervised sea beaches are acceptable unless they have been specifically deemed unsafe by local commanders or host-nation officials.

Though the policy may seem severe, the rationale is well-founded.

"The reason for this is we don't have lifeguards on duty at those places and we've had too many drownings in the past," said Peter Ströhlein, safety officer at U.S. Army Garrison Bamberg.

Ströhlein has been at the Bamberg Safety Office for 25 years and said the policy has been in effect for those years.

There were a tremendous amount of water-related deaths and that's why the policy was enacted, he said.

Though some lakes in the states may have designated swimming areas and on-duty lifeguards, similar supervision is not practiced at lakes in Germany.

"When you're in Germany, you're on your own," Ströhlein said.

Ströhlein further advises Soldiers to properly prepare for a jump in the pool.

"If you've been laying in the sun for an hour, you should cool your body temperature a little bit," he said. "You can go in the shower at the pool, so it's not such a shock when you jump into the relatively cold water."

Of course, drinking alcohol and swimming do not mix because it raises the probability for an accident, he added.

For more information on swimming safety, see the Installation Safety Office's list of approved swimming sites by clicking on Authorized Swimming Areas.

Afghan National Police graduate from U.S. training program

By 1st Lt. Katherine O'Brien, 630th Military Police Company

Fifty Shinwar Afghan National Police Soldiers celebrated their graduation from the Directed District Development Training course at their eastern Afghanistan district center, Shinwar district June 25.

The Directed District Development Training, known to the U.S. Army and Afghan National Police as "D-Three Training," is an extensive program aimed at enhancing the community policing and paramilitary skills of the ANP. The ANP qualified on AK-47 rifles and on pistols. They also learned how to conduct searches of personnel and vehicles and operate traffic control points.

"The training they receive will provide the Afghan National Police with guidance and a way of operating that will protect the local population as well as build good relations with the Afghan people in Shinwar," said Staff Sgt. James Oberle, Squad Leader for 1st Squad of 2nd Platoon, 630th Military Police Company, from Bamberg.

Oberle's squad is responsible for the mentorship and development of the Shinwar Afghan National Police District Center.

The ceremony was held inside of the district center due to the hundred degree heat outside and was hosted by the Shinwar Chief of Police, Col. Jan Ded, who also received his certificate of training and spoke at the graduation.

"It is so motivating to see so many Afghan's willing to stand up and defend their homeland," said Ded in regards to the completion of the training. "I have a great deal of respect for all of the Afghan National Police willing to risk their lives for a chance at a safer, more secure Afghanistan."

Guests from the community, police headquarters and coalition forces received an opportunity to take part in handing out the coveted graduation certificates and thanking the graduates for their hard work and dedication to keeping their local community safe.

"We want to encourage cultural exploration," she said. "We have tried to incorporate as many different activities as much as we can."

In addition to cultural exploration, the students are offered a variety of sports and fitness activities, field trips and service learning projects.

"They spend a lot of time outdoors," she said. "In fact, they probably spend more time outside than inside."

Each week, the students are assigned to groups. They attend a tribal council where they see skits, sing songs and listen to announcements.

During lunch, the students dine family-style with their group. This helps foster relationships, McClelland said.

In the afternoon, the students move from their groups to individual activities, which they can pick.

Giving the elementary age students a choice in activities is an important part of the program, said Patricia Turner-Lapp, training and program specialist.

"Research has shown that we need to empower young children," she said. "When given a variety of choices, children increase their self-help skills and independent thinking."

These skills will also benefit the students when they return to school, Turner-Lapp said.

"We have them for 10 weeks in the summer," she said. "When they return to school these skills will help in the learning process."

The program also offers something for all ages, McClelland said.

"This year we are offering some activities specifically for the older kids group," she said.

Operation "OKG," or older kids group, is offered to fourth and fifth grade students. The goal of the activities is to focus on mentoring, healthy habits, making positive choices and learning.

By offering specific activities for the older students, program coordinators hope to help ease the transition for the children to the Child, Youth and School Services Middle School Teen Program, which they will be attending in the fall, McClelland said.

In addition, children age 10 through 17, also have the opportunity to participate in Adventure Week, which is hosted in conjunction with the Child, Youth and School Services Sports and Fitness program, said DeWayne Gamble, sports and fitness director.

Adventure Week activities include activities such as hiking, biking, canoeing, high ropes course and a trip to an amusement park. The first Adventure Week was held in June. The second Adventure Week will be held the week of July 19.

"Depending on the ages of the students, we will tailor it to their ability," Gamble said. "It actually works out well; the older kids mentor the younger ones."

Another unique aspect of the program is that parents have the flexibility to sign up for the whole summer or just for a few weeks, McClelland said.

So far, the feedback from the students has been positive, McClelland said.

"Some came just for the day to see how it was and ended up asking to come back," she said. "They are excited about what's coming next."

Gabby Manolias, 8, looks forward to coming to the program each day.

"I like everything," she said. "I like going to the park, playing in the pool and just about everything."

Mekhi Blake, 7, enjoys playing outside.

"It's a good way to spend the summer," he said.

For more information about the program or to sign up, call the School Age Center at 0951-300-8698.

U.S. Army Europe information management officials introducing new 'data at rest' solution: BitLocker

By Sgt. Daniel J. Nichols, U.S. Army Europe Public Affairs Office

U.S. Army Europe information management officials are introducing a new solution to a Department of Defense requirement to protect locally saved data on government computers. That requirement calls for such information -- known as "data at rest" -- to be encrypted to safeguard it if the computer is lost or stolen.

Earlier this year the original plan to implement data at rest security was unsuccessful. USAREUR computer information systems experts said most users experienced computer down time, lock-outs, and a variety of other problems after the original software was installed.

Those experts are now working towards a new solution using a Microsoft program named BitLocker, which is expected to work more efficiently.

Microsoft's website claims that "BitLocker helps keep everything from documents to passwords safer by encrypting the entire drive that Windows and your data reside on. Once BitLocker is turned on, any file you save on that drive is encrypted automatically."

"Because it is part of Microsoft's operating system, and not third-party, and because the installation and support are built in, implementation of BitLocker is much easier," said Jonathan Lindow of USAREUR OP CIS, who has been working closely with the new data at rest solution.

"It will increase your level of security. If your laptop is stolen...you'll have assurance in knowing that your data is secure," said Lindow.

Lindow also said multiple tests of the new software are being conducted before it is installed on every USAREUR computer.

"The first goal is making sure we have all of the support pieces in place so we don't have any gaps in service," said Lindow.

Although no official implementation date is scheduled, Lindow said BitLocker will not be installed until the experts are sure they can roll out the new software with minimum inconvenience to the user.

USAREUR computer users can find BitLocker information and assistance in the BitLocker help folder on the European Enterprise portal. This link is available only to users coming on the .mil domain.

"It is an honor to be recognized for all the hard work that went into deploying the battalion and makes us more thankful for all the hard-working individuals that came together to make our deployment a success," Bateman said. "We had a lot of help from Installation Management Command, Branch Movement Control Team out of Warner Barracks, Grafenwöhr Training Area and Camp Ederle and they were definitely an integral part to the 173rd BSB's successful deployment."

Units are selected based on outstanding qualities recognized by judges on their visits. The battalion deployed 345 pieces of equipment and 420 soldiers to 34 sites across Iraq. Deployment preparation included a stringent pre-inspection of deploying equipment that resulted in zero deficiencies in equipment standards and documentation. Judges selected the battalion because of its exceptional performance during such a complex deployment.

This year the judging was much more competitive. Last year, 95 units were recognized from 294 submissions; this year, there were only 82 winners selected from 316 total submissions.

Conducting logistics for the Army is no small task; units around the world work tirelessly to meet the Army's needs as more troops are deployed to Afghanistan and troops are being drawn down from Iraq. Lt. Gen. Mitchell H. Stevenson, Deputy Chief of Staff of the Army for Logistics, is grateful for the opportunity to recognize Soldiers.

"At the Pentagon, we can make policies and plans, but none of it can be achieved without the Soldiers in the field," Stevenson said. "The Logistics Excellence Awards provide an opportunity to recognize outstanding units and their diligent efforts to sustain the force."

The following listing describes the categories in which Bamberg units placed:

WINNER, ACTIVE ARMY SMALL CATEGORY HHC, 391ST COMBAT SUS/SUP BN BAMBERG:

The battalion redeployed to Bamberg, from Operation Iraqi Freedom in November 2009. The unit prepared and redeployed 118 pieces of equipment and 75 personnel. The unit excelled in equipment preparation, documentation, and met deployment timelines and standards. The company prepared and maintained an error free Organizational Equipment List and submitted an accurate Unit Deployment List. The challenging nature of the redeployment and the exceptional manner in which it was accomplished were cited by the board and validation team as the primary reasons for this unit's selection.

RUNNER-UP, ACTIVE ARMY SMALL CATEGORY 317TH MAINTENANCE COMPANY, 391ST COMBAT SUS/SUP BN BAMBERG:

317th Maintenance Company's redeployment from Iraq to Bamberg was successful because of the logistics and operational planning that was conducted in order to ensure the safe and efficient redeployment of 47 pieces of equipment and 164 personnel from Iraq to Bamberg. The 317th Maintenance Company provided field maintenance (on-system repair and replacement) on an area basis and returned equipment to the user unit to enable the full spectrum of military operations for the Army's available force pool.

RUNNER-UP, ACTIVE ARMY LARGE CATEGORY 173RD BRIGADE SUPPORT BN BAMBERG:

The 173rd BSB effectively and efficiently deployed 158 pieces of cargo consisting of 3,404 pieces of equipment and 514 personnel from two Army Europe Garrisons located in Bamberg and Vicenza, Italy to three sites in Regional Command East Afghanistan. The 173rd BSB missions included conducting 10- and 20-level maintenance in support of the 173rd ABCT; operating a level II medical facility that has X-ray, dental, and lab capability; sustaining a comprehensive level II and augmenting a level I combat health support in AO Bayonet; conducting partnership operations with Afghan National Security Forces and local health care agencies and coalition forces; and supporting the Base defense and Base Operations for FOB Shank.
